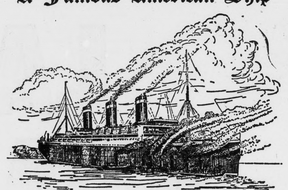
A Famous American Ship



The LEVIATHAN was long one of the world's most famous ships. Seized from Germany when America entered World War I, she illustrated our great need for American merchant ships. Famed both as a Troopship and a luxury liner of the gay twenties, she was a contender for the title world's fastest ship. She was the world's largest for a period. Hit by the depression she was laid up, her three tall red, white and blue stacks becoming a part of the Hoboken skyline. En route to a Scotch scrap yard in 1938, she proved twice that ships have a will of their own. Obviously not wishing to leave America, she suffered a strange breakdown in her steering mechanism which made her repeatedly turn back despite all efforts to keep her on course. Later her fog horn started blowing on a clear day. No one could find how it started or how to stop it. Only two years later, she would have been invaluable as a troopship, showing how vital it is to have merchant ships in peacetime so they will be available in an emergency. America can never depend upon foreign ships

To Protect Small Firms

Veterans Administration and the Small Business Administration announced joint action to assure small firms a fair share of VA business.

Harvey V. Higley, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, and Wendell B. Barnes, Administrator of the Small Business Administration, established a joint policy for setting aside many purchases for exclusive competitive award to small firms.

Mr. Higley said VA spends approximately $200,000,000 a year for goods and services of all types and that more than 50 per cent of this business now goes to small firms.

The new policy is designed to increase the proportion of awards to small firms where possible, according to the joint statement by Mr. Higley and Mr. Barnes.

Mr. Barnes said the Small Business Administration also has established similar joint programs with the Department of Defense, the General Services Administration, and the Department of Agriculture.

The VA agreement provides that centralized purchase requirements, with estimated value of $5,000 or more, will be reviewed by representatives of the two agencies for appropriate set-aside action of small firms.

Those procurements found able for award to small business shall be set aside for exclusive award among small firms. The entire amount of the purchase or a designated part may be reserved for small firms in this manner.

The agreement also provides that the Small Business Administration will help to supplement the VA Big Three with qualified firms which are registered with them.

Leadership does not consist in calling names and desk pounding but of something of the type in the head. If a man is sure of himself and the integrity of the cause he has used to reach his decision, he can be strong, but he can be strong, but he can be strong, but
